

IGGY AND THE STOOGES

Marvellous and Most Instructive Information Document

Including Utterly Confusing Comments and Asides.

By the way, some people have been saying very nice things about this rider, which has made me feel a bit of a fraud.

I must admit that most of it was actually ghost-written for me. I merely took dictation - from a ouija board!

Please do not forget to pick up your .pdf copy of the Pre-Production Checklist and read it from time to time between now and the show. At least once, anyway. I won't spoil it by telling you the ending, but it's jolly exciting! Think 'Pirates of the Caribbean' re-invented as an Ice Spectacular, with Johnny Depp going "Ooh, suits you sir!" at the end when the bird and the bloke kiss, and you'll be halfway there. Marvellous stuff!

Backline Requirements

IGGY AND THE STOOGES

ALL OF THIS LOT FOR A START.

□3 X HEAVY DUTY FLOOR MOUNTED FANS. I'm making a hovercraft in my spare time

□2 X MARSHALL VBA 8 X 10 CABINETS (There's lovely)

□3 X MARSHALL VBA BASS AMPLIFIERS Please make sure they're good ones or we'll all end up as wormlike web-based life forms in the bass player's online literary diahorrea. Honestly. He's like a sort of internet Pepys or Boswell, except without the gout and the syphilis. For all I know.

{I bet I know what you are thinking. You're thinking "Marshall Bass Gear? I didn't know Marshall made bass gear. "

Well, they do! And very good it is too. Some time, you should try it out, and if you run a hire company, you should buy some and start renting them. They make Ampeg gear sound like er... Ampeg gear. Anyway that's not the point is it? If you were thinking what I thought you were thinking, i.e. that you don't have any Marshall bass gear, we will have to have Amopeg instead, won't we?

Happy now?

So the alternative to the Marshall bass gear would be

□3 x Ampeg SVT 2 or Classic CL amplifiers - NOT the SVT 2 PRO version, just the standard SVT 2 please. and

□2 x Ampeg 8x10 cabinets I still think it's a damn shame you don't have the Marshalls, but never mind. I'm sure Satan will find a suitable way to punish you in the hereafter. Or the thereafter., depending on where you are standing. }

□4 x Vox AC30 HH Amplifier Heads And before you ask - yes we know. They are made in China out of bits of old rickshaw, but that's what we use, so that's what we want. Maybe you could persuade the rickshaw driver to come and show us how to switch them on?

Also, could you make sure they have been tested recently? And when I say "recently", I don't mean "Sometime in the three weeks preceding the occasion when it fell 3 metres off the top shelf in the warehouse as we were fork-lifting it back up, after it came back from that Inane Clown Pussy gig where they had the

'Piss On The Live Amplifier Competition'

(If you make smoke and sparks come out, and you are still alive afterwards, we'll give you a bottle of Miller Lite.

And a go on the band's skateboard.

And some clown make up.

And Hepatitis B...)

The sound it made as it hit the concrete!! BAD-OI-OI-OING!!! How we laughed" No! I mean recently. Within living memory. Preferably that of a goldfish.

There should be six (6) knobs - which our guitar roadie will personally count on arrival, (and trust me, he's a very good counter. I once saw him count four dozen packets of guitar strings in what seemed to be the blink of an eye, but was probably more like 20 seconds; I would say he is the closest thing we have in our touring party to a mathematical genius. Very good at Sudoku, and a genuinely pleasant chap to have around. On the other hand, he does have some rather unfortunate ideas on the descent of the panda. (Please see Monitor Requirements Rider for further details).

Where was I?

Oh yes.

And the names of these knobs shall be WAR, PESTILENCE, FAMINE...Aargh!

What am I saying? I mean

PRESENCE, BASS, MIDDLE, TREBLE, PRE- and POST- GAIN. Actually, forget all this. Just get us the amps

Moving on...

4 x Vox V212H Cabs The speakers for Vox used to be made in Batley, a small town in West Yorkshire where I went to school. That's interesting, isn't it? They are probably now manufactured in China, like the amps. Out of discarded coolie hats...

I'm joking of course. Vox amps are still the very best in the world, and Chinese stuff is great. I have a pair of chopsticks from China, and they are of absolutely stunning quality.

1 x 4-6 SPACE GUITAR RACK

8 X HEAVY DUTY SPEAKER CABLES. (4 x 1 metre and 4 x 2 metre) So we can plug all the speakers in, and still waste half an hour wondering why we've got two speaker cables left over.

Please do not take the liberty of improvising or altering this list on our behalf

A SPARKLING DW DRUM KIT (not black please)

(If you can't get a DW, please tell me, and let me know what other kits are available. Just don't mention the "P" word) consisting of the following drum sizes

1 x 24 inch BASS DRUM, or Kick Drum if you prefer to call it that. What's that in centimetres? 66, 69 possibly? If you have a girlfriend, now is the time to ask where you keep the tape measure.

If you have a boyfriend, he's probably sitting on it.

1 X 13 inch and 1 x 14 inch TOM-TOM, WITH MOUNTING. And if you can't bring the mounting to us, we'll have to send a bloke called Mohammed to the mounting. A stand mount would be fine, or a bass drum mount. Here endeth the sermon on the mount.

☐ 1 x 18 inch FLOOR TOM WITH LEGS. Not stand mounted. Can't stand stand mounted.

ALL OF THE ABOVE fitted with Remo Ambassador Clear heads, top and bottom Or muddled heads and a bottle of Alka Seltzer.

That's Ambassador Drumheads, NOT Emperor

☐ 1 X LUDWIG 6" X 14 inch METAL SNARE DRUM. preferably a Back Beauty (not the horse) but a brass or a Supraphonic will do Complete with newish ambassador heads, coated on the top, and unbent snares please. Call me old fashioned...

☐ 1 X DW 5000 BASS DRUM PEDAL. Double chain type. With a footplate. And a little blue plaque with "William Shakespeare slept here for six months* in 1586.shagging the arse off of Anne Hathaway."

(*Not the whole six months, obviously. I think they woke him at mealtimes.)

☐ 1 X DW 6300 SNARE DRUM STAND, that goes up very high, and preferably with legs that can be flattened against the floor., for at least a count of three.

☐ 1 X HEAVY DUTY ROUND CLOTH SEATED DRUM THRONE.

Because he's a king.

☐ 1 X HEAVY DUTY HI-HAT STAND. A two legger would be super. As long as it was designed to have only two.

☐ 2 X HEAVY DUTY BOOM STANDS. Just fill them with gunpowder, light a match, and they go BOOM!

☐ 2 X HEAVY DUYYY STRAIGHT CYMBAL STANDS. But we are equal opportunity employers, so gay stands may apply also. (They won't get the fucking job, though...)

☐ SABIAN OR ZILDJIAN CYMBALS, as follows

☐ 2 x15 inch HI-HAT ROCK CYMBALS that sound nice and are roughly the same size

☐ 2 x 18 inch CRASH CYMBALS

☐ 1 x 19 inch CRASH CYMBAL

☐ 1 X 20 inch CRASH CYMBAL

☐ 3 X HEAVY DUTY FLOOR MOUNTED FANS. I'm making a hovercraft in my spare time

All of the above drums on a

☐ CARPETED 8ft x 8ft x 2ft DRUM RISER/PLATFORM.

That's a 3m x 2m x 0.75m DRUM RISER/PLATFORM for those of you who live in the metric zone

Note to our American brethren: A metre is about 3 feet 3 inches.

And 'metre' is 'meter' spelt correctly...

Oi Oi, that's yer lot.

Thank you.

MONITOR REQUIREMENTS

IGGY AND THE STOOGES

We need: one (1) monitor man who speaks good English and is not afraid of death.

{Only joking... or am I?}.

Also, he needs to know a little bit about monitors. This may seem a little obvious, but believe me....

(For example, in Santiago de Compostela, in Galicia in Northern Spain, they appear to think - if they just ignore riders like this, then supply a fat, bearded, ignorant hippy with a digital monitor desk (doh!) who doesn't know shit about eq-ing, and monitor wedges that would be better suited to wedging doors open, and a load of stage managers and PA geezers and promoters reps who shout a lot - that this is the same as actually providing what the band needs in order to do a gig to the best of their ability. And that if they deny that their gear is no good, it will suddenly, mysteriously, become good.

Well, I would just like to say that the next time the Stooges get booked for their festival, I'm going to turn up with some pickled eggs, a small blue vibrator with a jelly dolphin balanced on the shaft, a set of dog-eared encyclop³/₄dia with the volume E-G missing, and a screwdriver that's been accidentally dropped in a lavatory.

And then, when they say, "That's not the Stooges",

I'm going to say, "Yes it is!"

And then they'll say "No it isn't".

And I'm going to say, "Yes it IS!!!"

See how they like it, the fuckers!

Anyway, where was I? Oh yes...

We do not have our own monitor man, because in the future robots will work for us and make the world a better place.

Sorry about that rant about Santiago, by the way. I just wanted to get it off my chest, and killing people is just sooo 1980s, don't you think?

The next page contains the information you require. Bear with me. Not a real bear, of course, like a grizzly..

By the way, I have a friend who assures me that the panda does not belong to the "Bear" family, but is actually a part of the "Pig"family. Could this possibly be true? It would explain why you don't see pandas on the menu in Jewish restaurants. wouldn't it?

Here's the Monitor Info

All wedges must be mirrored pairs that are bi-amped, powerful, very loud, uncompressed and unlimited.

Mix 1 - front vocal wedges.

IGGY'S VOCAL

SAXOPHONE

Can we arrange to have these wedges off the front of the stage on some kind of platform that is safe, secure and the same height as the stage.

This will make me very happy, like a happy little bunny rabbit.

About Iggy's vocal - we need lots. The best thing is, make it strong and punchy, a bit like a boxing kangaroo. Then turn it up.

When you think you have turned it up enough, turn it up some more!

A tsunami of voice

Mix 2 - side vocal wedges

IGGY'S VOCAL

SAXOPHONE [during the songs marked "saxophone"]

One on stage left, one on stage right, facing towards centre stage, and switched up so loud it feels like they are eating your ears.

For the sidefills, can we have two great big huge enormous things please, of a type that might be venerated as gods by the inhabitants of Easter Island, capable of reaching volumes that would make Beelzebub soil his underpants, and driven by amplifiers that could provide the power for a Monster Truck Rally. With dinosaur drivers.

They should be as far downstage as possible, and only 12 - 14 feet [4-5 meters (metres)] from center (centre) stage.

Mix 5 - Guitar wedgeSNARE BOTTOM

[I know it's always bottom. I'm obsessed with bottoms. I make no apology for that.]

Probably some other stuff as well I'll tell you on the day of the gig., just after James (the guitarist) tells me!

Mix 6 - Bass guitar wedge

Lots of SNARE BOTTOM

Lots of IGGY VOCAL

Oh, and during the show, could you just catch his eye and mouth the words "I love you"?

Thanks.

VOCAL

We would like to have a jolly big drumfill on the drummer's left hand side, with the horns pointing roughly straight down his ear canal; and when I say drumfill, of course, what I mean is a big, powerful bugger; a dormant volcano, ever waiting to erupt into streams of audio lava.

Not something that has a label on it saying "Karaoke in your own home, 15 watts per channel max".

Mix 8 - Saxophone Wedge

...Er...SAXOPHONE.

Wedge Suitability Guide

Here are several quick ways to find out if the wedges you are using are NOT really very suitable for a Stooges concert.

- 1.) They were removed from the parcel shelf of a Ford Corsair.
- 2.) When you look underneath, it says "©The Disney Corporation - collect all 5 from BURGER KING™"
- 3.) They can be lifted above head height - easily - by your wife.
- 4.) Er...
- 5.) That's it!

Jos Grain's almost-Zen method of Iggy-Pop-vocal-mic-in-the-monitors style testing type stuff.

(A kind of satellite navigator for the monitors. I made it up myself, so let's call it "Twat-Nav").

Here is a useful, I hope, guide to doing monitors for Iggy and the Stooges. It's not a conventional method, because I don't know anything about frequencies. The last time I told a monitor man that the monitors were folding back a bit, he looked at me really weird, then he said

MONITOR MAN "What do you mean?"

ME "Well you know, there's some really high pitched foldback in the monitors."

MONITOR MAN: "You mean feedback?"

ME: "Do I? "

MONITOR MAN: " What frequency?"

ME: "Er, every time I point this mic at the wedges..."

Right, my voice is what we doctors call "not very loud," and it's quite thin as well. I've seen fatter supermodels.

Whereas Iggy's voice is rather powerful, and also very rich and frequency-full. So what I've found works quite well is, if we EQ the vocal mics so that my voice sounds completely normal, with no frequencies boosted, especially at the bottom end, and we turn it up so that it's as loud as a very loud thing, then when Iggy starts singing into it, all those lost frequencies will return and everything will be fine.

You might even have to turn it down a bit.

And here's another thing you might be able to help me with. Why is it that lighting men switch the strobes on for ages, while everybody is trying to work, and when you ask why, they say they are "testing them"?

Strobes are designed to be intermittent, aren't they?

So how can they tell they're not fucked?

STAGE PLAN AND INPUT LIST

IGGY AND THE STOOGES

On the next pages you will find a stage plan and channel list. Isn't it exciting? I bet you're glad you decided on a career in the music business now...

Stage Plan

Before we have a look at the stage plan, can I just say that we like to keep it as clear as possible, especially at the front.

This means all cables for the downstage wedges etc must be run off the front in the pit, not across the front of the stage.

My insurance doesn't cover me for allowing rock stars to fall off the front of the stage.

No lighting or monitor cables, no power cables, no toy robots, no television evangelists, no television cameramen, no substances related to the manufacture of creosote, no plastic seahorses, no bailiwicks, no crepuscules, no kooks and especially NO CAMERAMEN.

Now Iggy can run around in his customary manner, like a crazed running-around-type-thing and we can all relax in a haze of self-satisfied panic.

Sorry, there has been an error, and I have failed to upload a Stageplan. Could you email us and we'll send you one? In the meantime, here's a picture of a beechafer, which is a chafer that pretends to be a bee!

Good isn't it? I could have been a draughtsman, but we was poor in them days, and what with the war still going on, and the bubonic plague, we had to give up on even the simplest of pleasures. My toy tank was sent off to the Weapons Department, melted down, and made into a real tank. I still miss sitting inside it, firing shells at the neighbours' chimneypots, and machine-gunning cats.

Happy Days.

I wonder if the Fonz still looks 40.

Apparently Iggy met that Ron Howard once. You know, the ugly, baldy one out of Happy Days. Directs films. Got one of those faces you'd never get tired of punching. And I once saw Ron (Howard) in a restaurant with James Woods, the methodist actor, who is similarly sparsely-endowed with handsome genes. Here's an idea for a film, James. I'll start punching you in the face, and you method-act that it doesn't hurt.

And Ron Howard can direct!!!

FRONT OF HOUSE

Preferred front of house system is D & B or JBL Vertec, and lots and lots of it. Preferred front of house consoles are Midas XL4, Heritage H3000, XL3 or Soundcraft Series 5. In that order. DEFINITELY NO YAMAHAS & DEFINITELY NO DIGITAL CONSOLES. See below for further information.

There should be graphic equalizers across the system.

I need two good quality reverb units, preferably 2 x Lexicon PCM91 and I need a tap delay, preferably a TC2290.

I need eight compressors (six to be inserted over input channels and two to be inserted over a pair of groups).

I'm a big fan of valve compressors, love them darling, so if you have any, please put them in. If you don't have any valve compressors, I would like DBX160s.

Please supply a minidisc recorder that is plugged in and ready to record, and a CD player.

I need to have a line down which I can talk to the stage, so please let me have one. I also need comms between front-of-house-village and monitor-city..

When we arrive, if there is either a YAMAHA or a DIGITAL CONSOLE of any manufacture located on front of house island, I will chop it into a hundred pieces, and each of those pieces I will chop into a hundred pieces... so that's like, er... tenty hundred? Anyway, then I will douse them in petrol and burn them. In accordance with local and national guidelines on the burning of bits of shit mixer, of course.

SO DON'T DO IT. I'm like a big nasty man if I get upset...

On a lighter note -

We will supply all microphones, and vocal mic stands that are easy to throw and hard to break. Please supply all microphone cables inc. 3 x 20metre/50ft cables for the main vocal lines.

Any audio questions please contact Henry McGroggan

Do it now!!

LIGHTING REQUIREMENTS

IGGY AND THE STOOGES

[This was written by someone who doesn't really know what he's talking about. I cannot tell a lie. Lights-wisely speaking, I'm an absolute arse-head. But I know what I like. And although nobody goes home whistling the lights, it's also true that no-one goes to gigs to stare at the fucking P.A. stacks.]

We do not have a lighting designer, or lighting person of any kind.

We had a lighting designer once, but he went mad, so we shot him. It was the kindest thing. Now he's a light of a different kind, one of God's little Gobos in Dimmer Heaven.

The point of all this nonsense is, of course, that we need someone to brighten up our day, and this is what we would like them to do, if it is at all possible using the whiz-bang technology that is the modern lighting system.

You know in the olden days, when knights were bold and the normal club lighting system was three flaming torches made out of sticks, peasant rags and animal fat, lighting designers used to use these things called "washes". Nowadays, of course, "washes" are more likely to be skin embrocations that serve to keep the lighting designer's complexion un-pasty, but in those unsophisticated times they were a bunch of lights, usually all the same colour, or color, which made the stage go, for example, red. Or blue. Or white.

We-ell. That's what we want, really.

Someone to colour the stage while the band plays, in very basic colours. (Not Benetton!) Especially white. I mean, a nice white backdrop with some color scrollers pointed at it would be nice too, so that we could have, say orange in the background and blue on the stage. But basically, that's it.

Oh, and a lighting person who could just set a scene at the beginning of a song, then sit on his hands until the start of the next song . I know that this seems like a tall order when most LDs suffer from some sort of nervous disorder that won't permit their hands to stay still for longer than 8 milliseconds, but honestly, that's what we would be happiest with. Maybe we could get somebody to sit next to the LD with a big stick, then if they looked like they were going to "do lighting" halfway through a number - WHAMMO!!! broken desk, broken fingers.

As for smoke, if you could save it for sending messages to indigenous North American tribespeople, I, Big Chief Fucks-Around-With-Drums, would be um heap grateful.

"And moving lights?" I hear you ask. If you do have access to moving lights, I would prefer it if you would move them to the back of the stage, and leave them there. It's not that we dislike them, it's just that we think they may be a little shall we say, overused? these days. Keep a couple for throwing static shapes in the background if you like. That might be interesting...

Lights directly in the eyes are a real problem for the singer, so we don't like spotlights or lights on the sidefills, or lights on trusses over the audience etc. I know we have to light him up a bit but we have to try to do this using the lights directly above him.

Sometimes we do gigs where the LD tries to sneak the spotlights on halfway through the show. Unfortunately, if that does happen, it then becomes incumbent upon me to find the LD after the show and eat his entire family.

We really just need someone to set a scene for each song, then leave it. It's not really too much to ask, is it?

If anyone can come up with a suggestion for lighting that would add to the overall excitement of the Stooges stage show, I would be pleased to hear it, but if it's along the lines of "When they do a fast song, I think I should flash all the lights quite quickly, whereas if they do a slower song, I think should flash all the lights, but at a slightly reduced rate", do please keep it to yourselves. My boredom threshold is incredibly low...

So-ooo, just to recap:

Mmmmm!!!

5 or 6 washes in strong colours such as red, blue, white, orange, 181, that type of thing.

Colour scrollers juxtaposing background colours to the washes

Static goboid shapes in the background. Static meansing "not moving".

Oh yes, some molefays pointing at the audience. The band likes to see their happy faces from time to time. God knows why.

Aaaarrgh!!!

Constantly flashing and moving lights e.g. scans and strobes. Smoke. (I don't care if I never see another beam in my life...)

Spotlights and other lights in the eyes.

I can promise you that our singer (Iggy Pop, by the way) will make it look like all your lights are attempting to jump off the front of the stage like a gang of par 64 lemmings. He'll be all over the place, like a mad woman's shit, so you don't have worry about moving lights.

Here's a thought for you. Why not watch the band instead of trying to make patterns with the beams? Unless you can think of a way of writing "FUCK OFF JOS" in beams across the stage....

I hope this is of some use to you. If not, you can always use the other side of this sheet of paper for doodling on. I'll even give you a pen. I can't say fairer than that, now can I?

Some people get it, some people don't.

Thanks for caring

Your pal

Jos

Filming Requirements

IGGY AND THE STOOGES

Filming - a TV Eye view of the world.

Hello everybody. This is a short message to TV companies, Video makers, Photographers and Media Types in general.

Now don't get me wrong, I have a lot of respect for people in the communications industry, in fact my ancestors have a particularly strong historical link with the Postal Service, as someone once threw a television repairman at my mother.

However in recent years, and I'm sure you'll agree with me on this one, there has been an explosion in the number of, shall we say, persons blessed by the Good Lord with a complete absence of talent, attempting to force their way, by any means necessary, into the public eye. Hand in hand with this, I'm afraid to say, has come a massive increase in the amount of production companies willing to massage the over-large egos of these unfortunate individuals, and to allow them the airtime they crave. It's got to a point where there are companies who assume that everyone who walks onto a stage is a desperate, attention-seeking moron, who will put up with any amount of intrusion just to get themselves a little footage.

I have to say that The Stooges are not those guys!

Media attention - GOOD! Interfering with performance - BAD!

Could I therefore request that all putative film-makers and budding Hollywood directors ask themselves the following questions:

1. What type of film am I trying to make?
2. Am I making a pop video, or am I documenting a live show?

Because the fact is, as soon as you push a camera into the face of an artiste, you completely change the nature of their performance. The Stooges do try to give their audience a great show, but I think there is nothing more soul-destroying than to see a band on stage surrounded by cameramen and their assistants scurrying about like bazooka-wielding hobbits. At a wet festival somewhere i once saw a guitarist being followed all over the stage by a cameraman and sidekick all covered, in bright flourescent plastic sheeting, including the camera It looked like he was being stalked by a demented pantomime horse! I personally thought it looked absolutely terrible, and I speak as someone who believes that most rock and roll bands would be improved by the introduction of a pantomime horse. Take the Rolling Stones as an example.; if you could guarantee that there was going to be a pantomime horse, it' would be almost worth going to one of their concerts.

With today's technology, anyone can get a decent shot of anything without a man in a little go-kart tracking its every move. It's unnecessary, and it looks horrible.

Fly-on-the-wall, lovey, think fly-on-the-wall. It's just a gig. Nobody's going to get an Oscar for Best Camerawork. And that's it, really.

Oh yes, and Iggy adores breaking cameras. Did I mention that??

So really it's best not to get too close to him. Especially if he looks at you in a funny way.

And cameramen - if he heads towards you looking like he's about to grab the camera - he's probably about to grab the camera. It's a sort of clue...

Of course, I will be on hand to try and prevent him from destroying your equipment; unfortunately, there is only one person I can think of who likes to break cameras more than Iggy does, and that's ME...

Thanks very much for your kind attention. You'll get some intense footage whatever happens. Trust me on this one.

Jos. (The ugly one on the crew, possibly wearing a hat and a very, er, visual shirt.)

By the way, I wonder if anyone" in media knows why certain cameramen think it/s innovative and exciting to be constantly moving the camera whilst filming, swinging it up in the air, running around with it swaying from side to side in great big arcs, or even worse, going wide/tele/wide/tele/wide/tele in a pathetic attempt to keep in time with the music?

Don't they ever watch back what they've filmed?

Don't any of their colleagues ever tell them that it looks shit?

Is it just me who feels like smacking them across the back of the head with a tripod?

For fuck's sake, someone have a word! It didn't look good in 1980, and it doesn't look good now. If they really can't hold the camera steady for longer than a couple of seconds, maybe it's time to ring Alcoholics Anonymous...

Just a thought.

Parking and Security

Security:

We will require the use of two dedicated and intensely loyal security persons to be stationed at the entrance to each of the two dressing rooms. Or do I mean one at each? Otherwise that would be four, and I think we only need two, one at each door. Wait a minute, let's start again.

May we have two dedicated and intensely loyal security men, preferably built like brick shit-houses, one for each of the doors leading to the two dressing rooms?

Unless either of the dressing rooms has an extra door...

OK...

Please count the number of doorways leading in or out of the two dressing rooms that we are going to be using, then supply an unspecified number of security men, with the qualities mentioned above, the quantity of whom shall be exactly proportional to the number of said doors, adhering strictly to a ratio of 1:1. So probably two in total.

They need to be in position 1 hour prior to, and 1 hour after, the band's performance. And the band play for about one and a half hours. So that's about...ooh, let me see, three and a half hours altogether.

Call it four just in case they do a particularly long version of one the songs.

No entrance to these rooms during these times will be allowed without co-ordination of the tour manager. Let's hope he's got his co-ordination back by then.

Parking

Artist parking area passes will be required for 5 cars. No tour bus parking is required - although some of those American limos are as long as a tour bus... And that one that Madonna rides around in has a lap dancer in it! Can you believe that? !?!? I wonder how that affects the insurance premium?

Notes:

3 large industrial fans to be provided by promoter two on stage and one in the dressing room for use by the drummer. He's practicing that scarf thing that they used to do in Bon Jovi and Heart videos.

We will require the exclusive use of two dressing rooms for the entire day of our performance.

Did I mention about the two dressing rooms before? I think I did. They should have the ability to be temperature regulated by the occupants with both heat and air-conditioning, and have 120 volt electrical service in each. Which normally means a really iffy-looking wall socket that's already got three things plugged into it, one of which is the entire stage lighting rig. But let's hope this time it's different...

Catering Requirements

First of all, can I say what a pleasure it will be to work with you all.
Probably.

A BUNCH OF CATERING RIDER-TYPE STUFF

Hello. This is a list of stuff we need for the day of our show. It's not too complicated, but if you've got any problems, talk to us and we'll resolve them. I think you'll find we're very reasonable people. Except me.

First of all, and most importantly.

Stage Drinks ☺ Please have at least one case (24 small bottles) of still water and 24 large towels available 30 minutes before the Stooges go on stage, and handed directly to the stage monkey called Jos Grain (that's me!)

Can we have strong coffee & tea with milk, sugar, spoons, etc. all day? You can provide a kettle or a coffee machine if you like, otherwise I'm sure there's a Starbucks in your area. If there isn't, this is God telling you to open one. Oh, and some cups.

A bit of assorted food for the crew is always appreciated, at lunchtime. Like a lot of people, we like tasty food that isn't full of pesticides and mad cow disease. Thick vegetarian soup is a safe bet, with some salads and fresh bread; that type of thing. Lovely. For about 4 or 5 people.

At load-out time, when we're going to leave, we like to be supplied with two enormous pizzas,(either to eat, or to leave on the bus until we find a truckstop trashcan with an entrance about 10cm/2 inches round, then we desperately try to fold the enormous stiff pizza box so that it's small enough to go in, which it never is, so we leave it on the side with all cold tomato puree and stringy cheese stuff dripping out of the side...There are similar pizzas being thrown out of most bands' busses at any hour of the day or night so it looks like a bunch of Dali's clocks /Anyway... one quattro formaggio and one hot pepperoni. Or if there's no pizza available, some sandwiches or sandwich making ingredients. Bread, like baguettes (en belgique, d'une boulangerie qui est specialisŽe en baguettes) cheese, mustard, salad, maybe a bit of ham and chicken. But hopefully not one of those sandwiches from Subway with beef and alfalfa sprouts sticking out, like a Florida retiree's bikini bottoms. Yuk.

And some fruit.

And chocolate. Yum yum.

3 litres of still water

3 litres of sparkling water

12 bottles of nice beer

and 1 litre of fruit juice.I prefer grapefruit.

Dinner for ten people should be available, cooked at the venue or supplied by a local restaurant, either at the restaurant or brought to the venue. We need to have a selection of chicken, fish, and vegetarian. Calling Germany ... vegetarian means "does not have any meat in it". That includes sausage. And whatever 'speck' is.

Dinner for Iggy and two other people should be available at the venue or at a local restaurant, after the show. Local cuisine is acceptable, (i.e. local food for local people) or steak/chicken, endangered species (excluding moths and anything really cute), snake, whale, or nurse shark, - with the nurse on the side, just in case. Well, we could get bitten, couldn't we?

One (1) pack of Poker size playing cards (such as Bee, Bicycle, or Aviation). For me. In case I want to do some card tricks. Or in case one of the band's girlfriends fancies a quick game of strip poker while the band are on stage. For money, naturally.

Eric Fischer, The Stooges Road Manager, would like to acquire some pins, or badges, I think he means, that signify the current country (yours) so he can stick them on his tour jacket and look like a big YMCA power walker or something. Is this feasible? You might have to call him to get a sensible version of this request. I feel all nerdy just typing it..

b>Breaking News! Eric no longer requires these bits and bobs, so please ignore the last instruction. I don't know why, maybe he's gone off badgers. I can understand that. Hands up anyone who can name even one thing that badgers have done to enhance our lives ? You can't, can you?

All badgers ever do is have adventures with moles, and they give cattle TB.. And what's the stripe in their hair all about? Who do they think they are, Dave Vanian? Maybe they do, in which case it could be due to a form of damned newrose-is. Damned if I know.

Anyway, no pins for Eric, that's my point. Unless you are an acupuncturist.

We need two dressing rooms to be made available for our sole use, viz.

Dressing Room One - for Iggy

You know what would be really nice? It would be really nice if you could make this room look less like a typical rock & roll dressing room and more sort of... Interesting? Are you with me? Just let someone loose with a little bit of artistic flair... Er, do you know any homosexuals? And am I allowed to say that? Probably not.

Please do not display any posters relating to the current show/festival, or posters of any past shows or festivals, inside this room. No festival running orders or show times and suchlike either. Just some nice art and things to look at in a meditative kind of way. And maybe something to smash! (Just a little joke., nobody's going to smash anything. Not deliberately, anyway.)

We would like there to be some sensible chairs in the room. ("Sensible chairs?

"What does that mean?" you might be asking, and to tell you the truth, I'm not sure myself. I think it means we don't want chairs that are prone to taking stupid risks, or making silly claims without thinking them through. So, you know, sensible chairs. Chairs with a grip on reality/ the floor.).

Heating and/or air conditioning that works efficiently, and is suitable for the local climate and the time of year; in other words, if we were to arrive in, say, Alaska in the winter, and there was just an air conditioner, that would be a bad thing, but if there was a great big roaring open fire, with marshmallows toasting on it, that would be a good thing. See what I mean?

A carpet would be appreciated too. Preferably on the floor {with the chairs on top)
This dressing room should also contain the following items:

- A folding, metal chair, such as this one  for example. It has to fold, so that Eric can trap his thumb in it every night. You will recognise Eric because he has these enormous thumbs. Very handy for hitch-hiking, and for approving things, such as the folding metal chair in the dressing room.
- A kettle or water heating device of some description.
- Some fresh ginger, honey, lemons, and a sharp knife. So we can make ginger, honey and lemon tea. God knows why.
- Some Chinese gunpowder tea. So we can attempt to blow up the dressing room. That's another joke by the way. Good thing this isn't an airport...
- An English language newspaper like the New York Times or the Miami Herald. Or the Guardian (my personal favourite). Or a copy of USA Today that's got a story about morbidly obese people in it. Most amusing!
- Somebody dressed as Bob Hope doing fantastic Bob Hope impersonations and telling all those hilarious Bob Hope jokes about golf and Hollywood and Bing Crosby. Oh God, I wish I'd been alive in those days, so that Bob Hope could have come and entertained me in some World War 2 hell-hole before I went off and got shot. What joy they must have experienced...

OR

Seven dwarves, dressed up as those dwarves out of that marvellous Walt Disney film about the woman who goes to sleep for a hundred years after biting a poisoned dwarf, or maybe after pricking her finger on a rather sharp apple... or something. What was the name of that film? Oooh, it's on the tip of my tongue. Was it Cinderella? Doesn't matter, we just want the dwarves. Taller people are acceptable, of course. It's attitude, more than altitude, that's important here. Don't forget the pointy hats!

If neither of the above are available we will settle for a belly dancer. In fact, she can use my belly to dance on...

- A big bucket of ice, or a refrigerator, containing:
- 2 litres good quality still mineral water. I think it should originate in the country we are in.

(I've just realised what that film was called. Goldilocks. Goldilocks and the something something. Tum-ti tum. .. Temple of Doom! That's it! Goldilocks and the Temple of Doom! I knew I'd get it in the end).

- 6 Small bottles of mineral water, at room temperature.
- 6 bottles of decent local beer.
- 10 x 16oz plastic cups and
- 4 nice wine glasses, made out of real glass please!
- A corkscrew to open wine bottles
- 2 bottles of smooth, full-bodied, Bordeaux type red wine. Probably French. And something we've heard of, but still can't pronounce. Look, there's fucking loads of good red wines. Ask the man in the wine shop. Or here's a number of suggestions:

1st choice - a Medoc, St. Emilion, Pamerol, or Pauillac, years '86, '89, '90

(It wasn't Goldilocks and the Temple of Doom, was it? How annoying.)

2nd choice - a Barolo or Barbaresco '89 or '90

- 4 large, clean towels.
- 24 large paper napkins
- 1 box of tissues
- 1 medium sized trash can, disguised as a potted plant.

See? Not all that bad, is it?

Dressing Room Two for The Stooges

- Heres a difficult one you get you started. Rice Dream milk substitute) Made out of rice. Which is why it's so expensive - think how many grains of rice they's have to milk to get just one liter. I mean, grains of rice are very very small, so imagine how incredibly tiny their udders must be. Put it this way, they are more likely to be featured in Milk and Milkmen magazine than in than Huge Juggs or Men Only. So anyway, 1 carton of Rice Dream (vanilla) and one carton o Rice Dream (plain j please. Probably best to put them in the fridge, so we don't end up with a couple of cartons of Rice Nightmare. Did you know that over half of the world's population depends on fice fmerely for survival. I bet they woud love to wash it down with a big glass of cow's milk... 3 cases x 12oz (small, say, 50cl) bottles of still mineral water. Good quality. Doesn't have to be French, though.

- 3 large bottles of good quality sparkling water. And 5 large bottles of poor to medium quality sparkling water, for me. Again, un-French is good. Unless we are in France, in which case - What a marvellous country.
- 1 x case of big bottles of good, premium beer. You decide. But remember, I might ask you to taste a bottle, so buy something nice!! Here's a clue - it's probably won't start with a letter "B" and end with "udweiser". Unless it's Czech
- 2 cans of red bull or similar. Something with testicles in it. Or testicles lite.
- 6 bottles of alcohol free beer. There's always someone who likes to mix it with his whisky. And vodka. And other beer, probably. Is that classed as having a bit of a drink problem, having to pretend to be drinking, even when you aren't? I have no idea why we order this.. You know why it's called alcohol free, don't you? Because it never gets drunk, that's why! Ah well. Put it in the dressing room, and, at the end of the night, take it out again. Look at it as a sort of symbolic act. A metaphor, or a parable if you like. It's a meaningless act, the very meaninglessness of which imbues itself with deep and almost meaningful meaning. If only I could work out what it is. Or, suppose, what it isn't
- 1 nice bottle of Chablis. That's a type of wine. Not just an ordinary wine that's dressed rather Chablis. (Does anyone actually understand this joke? I might as well take it out if not)
- 12 cans of Coca Cola. Well I think it's disgusting stuff. Like McDonalds predigested sandwiches. Do you know, if I had to choose between a McDonalds with coke, and having my tongue ripped out and placed inside my own colon, I'd probably be licking my arse right now...
- 12 cans of assorted sodas. Ginger beer? Dandelion & burdock? I don't know. Lemonade?
- 2 x 48oz bottles of Ocean Spray cranberry juice. (48 oz is American for "large"). But no blends please. No orange and cranberry, or cranberry and turkey. Cranberry with even more cranberry is ok.
- 1 x 48 oz bottle of tropicana orange juice. But tropicana doesn't come in a bottle, does it? Except when it's trying to find out it's own sperm count...
- Some kettle chips or chips artesanale or hand-made chips or.... Do you know what I mean? Real, old fashioned, proper potato chips. But from a different kettle to the one they made the vodka in.
- Cauliflower & broccoli, cut into individual florets and thrown immediately into the garbage. I fucking hate that.

(Nearly finished now. I think I could do with a rest. I've been on my feet all day. No, really! Somebody stole all the chairs out of the office. Bastards!!)

- Some crackers And maybe some dips. such as hummus. Nuts and assorted nibbly things.

- A selection of Belgian chocolate.
- Lots & lots of clean ice. (Not ice that a polar bear has been standing on, with its big mucky feet. Polar bears are still bears, aren't they? Not pigs, like the panda.)
- And then lots more for after the show. Ice, that is. Forget about the panda.
- Plastic cups, assorted sizes, suitable for hot and cold drinks. At least one sleeve of 16oz solo, and some little ones. Does anyone outside the U.S.of A. understand what this means? I don't, and I wrote it.
- 18 large bath towels. Not face cloths. Towels. Nice and freshly laundered too.
- A copy of the New York Times. A recent copy, if possible. In fact, today's would be nice.

I think that's about it. No. wait...

A Triumph Scrambler motorcycle for me would be nice. To keep. With a full tank of petrol (that's gas, if you're American. It's a liquid, though. I don't think they have thought this one through, do you?). And a motorcycle helmet, full face, size medium.

Well, you can't blame me for trying.

Or maybe just

A GOLF CART, should one be available, to make it easier to get around the site.

CAN I JUST SAY THANK YOU ON BEHALF OF THE BAND, AND I HOPE THEY PiSS THE AUDITION.

Dead Dog Island

By the way, if there are any Reality TV executives reading this - hardly likely, I know, but - here is my idea for a Reality TV show.

It's called 'Dead Dog Island', where a group of contestants / dog lovers is asked what is their favourite breed of dog, then whatever they reply (for example, 'Poodle'. Or ' Labrador') they are then presented with a dead dog of that particular breed, which they have to cook in a number of different ways, say about six or seven, and then eat it all up over the course of the next oooh... two weeks or so.

But just to make it a little more difficult and sort of gameshow-y, all the knives are blunt, and they have to wear a pair of those enormous clown trousers, made out of wood or something, so that they can't quite reach anything. Well only just, anyway.

The first person to completely eat all his (or her) dog, and not be thrown off the island by the public for being too pleasant, or maybe unpleasant, wins another, live dog of exactly the same breed. And pots of money. And free dog food for life (of the dog).

This all would take place on some romantic tropical island somewhere, so it would all be very visual and make really super telly.

Maybe there could be a celebrity version, with currently out-of-the-spotlight celebrities in it. Does anybody know if Cher is a dog lover? I think Stevie Nicks probably is.

Oh, and no sicking it all up into a bucket every night when the cameraman goes to bed. That would be frowned upon...
